A WEEKLY DIGEST OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE PARLIAMENT OF THE UNITED KINGDOM

Back from the break, and straight into a fight

For the first half of the week the Commons was dark — MPs were still on their Whitsun holidays until Sunday. They filed back in on Monday and got straight to work: four votes on the Armed Forces Bill, a 'votes at 16' bill and a duty-of-candour bill both reaching report stage, and 2,247 written questions from 236 MPs on everything from Ebola in the Congo to NHS dentistry. Health, as ever, drew the most fire.

THE FEATURE

The police handling of the Henry Nowak stabbing

The most-pressed single subject of the week never appeared under any official heading. Rupert Lowe (Restore Britain) tabled eight written questions to the Home Office over the police response to the fatal stabbing of Henry Nowak. He pressed on whether attending officers misidentified the dying victim as a suspect, why he was handcuffed while seriously injured, and whether first-aid and casualty-care protocols were followed. He is also demanding that all body-worn video, radio traffic, emergency-call recordings and officer decision logs be preserved and disclosed to the family. And he is asking whether the Home Secretary has raised the handling with the Chief Constable of Hampshire and Isle of Wight Constabulary. None have been answered yet.

A SAMPLE OF THE WEEK'S QUESTIONS

Dental Services: Contracts · Andrew Snowden, Conservative

Has the Department assessed the impact of variation in Unit of Dental Activity (UDA) values between NHS dental contracts within the same Integrated Care Board area?

THE ANSWER From 1 April 2023, commissioning responsibility for primary care dentistry transferred to integrated care boards, including the duty to assess local oral health needs and set commissioning priorities. NHS England has issued an Assurance Framework to support boards in doing so.
